Mrs. Kniffin's Murder a Deep Mystery to Trenton's Police.

ARRESTS EXPECTED HOURLY

Suspicion Fastens Upon Dr. Kniffin and the Pretty Typewriter.

At that time Miss Purcell told a thrilling tate of masked men in her bedroom, who cowed her with knives and revolvers, and after all stole only $16 when they might have taken $100 just as well.

As was stated in the full story of the tragedy told in yesterday's Eventor World, Miss Purcell is a typewriter by occupation and a cousin of the murdered woman.

From all accounts she and Dr. Kniffin were good friends—too good, it is hinted. TRENTON, N. J., Jan, 4 .- The bold burglars who Miss Emma Purcell says invaded the home of dentist Arthur S. Kniffin during his absence yesterday. chloroforming and killing Mrs. Myra Kniffin, and giving Miss Purcell only enough of the narcotic to ender her unconscious, had not been captured this The police do not believe the murder

In consequence the majority of the people here believe to-day that the story of murderers. The tragedy has stirred up this community as no similar crime has ever done. The high standing of all the parties concerned, and the suspicion which has unavoidably faller on some of those most closely connected with the dead woman, renders the case intensely interesting to every or e.

ing moment.

The police are moving slowly. They have drawn a line within which they feel sure the guilty ones are, but they fear to act decisively without stronger evidence than they now possess.

Their strongest reason for disbelieving the burglar story lies in the fact that nothing was stolen from the house, although everything in it was turned topsy-turvy, and there were no indications of a forcible entrance.

CRIES WHICH NO ONE HEARD. Miss Purcell says that when she was aroused by Mrs. Kniffin's struggles the latter was crying "Help, murder!" at the top of her voice, and yet no one in the neighborhood heard the least unusual sound from the house during the night and there was a night watchmen on dury at a bank directly opposite the Kniffin omestead who neither saw nor heard any tourneties about the place during his commotion about the place during his tour of duty.

Miss Purcell has made several conflicting statements, Atter her first story she told another one, saying that upon retiring on the fatal one, saying that upon retiring on the fa'al night the bed was shoved close to the bedroom door, and that it was the noise of the burglars shoving this away that aroused Mrs. Kniffin, who in turn aroused her, and that she sprang from the bed to run to a window, when the intruder got in, intercepting and chloroforming her.

"Then as to the cloth reported saturated will chioroform and thrown over Miss Purceil's face, this proves to have been Miss Purceil's handkerchief, which she says was snatched from her hand for the purpose. We consider this somewhat improbable."

Miss Purceil learned typewriting at the Trenton Business College, where she was a favorite pupil. She has been nearly two years employed at the EmpireRubber office. Her employer and many others speak highly of her. Her father is dead, but her mother lives on a farm in Warren county. It is understood that this farm adjoins ne owned by Miss Purcell's parents, and

The fact that Mrs. Kniffiu's parents say they place confidence in Miss Purcell and believe her story of the burglary only adas to the difficulty of fixing a solution of the great mystery. It is known that the marriage of Kniffin to Miss Murphy was not regarded with favor by her parents.

It is understood that after the autopsy the stomach of the dead woman will be sent to Princeton to be submitted to chemical analysis by the college pro-

It was rumored here that Jimmy Lee, the well-known trainer, has left Mr. Charles liced.

The racing began with a dash for maiden three-three-olds, and Bengaline earned her first bracket. She was quoted at 50 to 1 and paid $104.50 in the mutuels for $22, only one straight ticket being sold on her.

The bulk of the money went on Borcalaise and Glenficound for the second, with Glanmound beating the favorite a length.

The talent scored a win by $8. Nicks victory in the third race, and they also plunged heavily on Lemon for the place.
